MUSIC AND THE DRAMA.

ACADEMY OF MUSIC. The first performance of "Rigoletto" at the Academy last night was carried solely by Mme. Gerster and Signor Galassi. Much art in the performers is demanded to make so revolting a play interesting, and in spite of a marked willingness on the part of the audience to enjoy every number of Verdi's music, there were many disappointing quarter-hours. They were caused, for the greater part, by Signor Bertini, a tenor who, with a very inadequate equipment, attempted to sing the part of Duce. His melancholy experiences when attempted the sensational tricks common to opera singers moved the audience to laughter in spite of the tragic gloom of the play and perhaps served a good purpose by robbing the last act of some of its horrors. There was no possibility of any one being carried away by the filusion of any one being carried away by the illusion with Signor Bertini's occasional explosions to prevoke the risibles. Mile. Vianelli, who sang Madd-lene, proving to be hardly more than a useful voice in the concerted music of the last act, like Sig. Lombardini (Sparrafucile), the interest centred in the two admirable people whom we have already mentioned, and who can never be mentioned in other than words of warmest braise. warmest praise.
On Friday "Norma" will be given, with the following distribution of characters:

Signor Cherubini
Sikner Bieletto
Mile Valerga

PEOPLE WHO WENT TO THE OPERA. The audience last evening at the Metropolitan Opera House did not differ in quality, though it did somewhat in numbers, from that of the opening night. There were a number of empty boxes, and only the first fow rows in the balcony and family circle were occupied. The parquet, however, was well filled. One could not The parquet, nowever, was well lined. One could not belp noting the difference in general brilliancy, however, from the opening night. Madame Nilsson, with Professor Dorenus and a party, was in one of Mr. Abbey's boxes, Madame Nilsson being one of the most enthusiastic in applauding Mme. Sembrich. Henry Irving and Miss Eilen Terry were in one of the baignoir boxes and appeared to enjoy the opera thoroughly. During one of the intermissions the spectacle of the two great actors, Irving and Henry Booth, talking together in a corridor interested a number who chanced to pass. Mme. Sembrich was the recipient, at the close of the first act, of a floral violin made of scarlet and dark crimson carnations edged with white carnations, it being a crimson carnations edged with white carnations, it being a tribute to her talent as a violinist as well as a singer. She was also heartily recalled and showered with bouquets in the third act, being called out four times after singing "O Shed One Tear of Pity," while the audience chapped and shouted "Brava!" Campanini was warmly applauded for his singing in the graveyard and the death scene, and came before the curtain at the close of the opera to make his bow.

The audience at the Academy was nearly as large as that of Monday night, but it was far less brilliant than the one which assembled on the opening night. A large number, however, were present last night who attended the first performance. Little enthusiasm was shown for any of the singers except Gerster and Galassi. These two, however, received most hearty applause, and many handsome floral designs were given them at the close of the first act. The misfortunes of the new tenor, Bertini, elicited suppressed "ahs" and ill-concealed laughter. The four principal singers were called before the curtain after the second act.

THE DUKE'S MOTTO. Brougham's version of Feval's Le Bossu has been known here for twenty years, and accordingly neither the recital of its story nor the specification of its beauties and defects will be expected at this time. It was re-produced last night at the Fifth Avenue Theatre, after a long rest, and the performance of it was seen there by a numerous audience with many marks of pleasure. The power that is possessed by this play to enkindle the fancy and excite the feelings cannot for a moment be doubted. It charms as the romances of old Alexandre Dumas invariably do-and the observer follows its current, notwithstanding improbable if not impossible incidents, with unbesitating credulity and with an eager desire to know how all will end. Last night the handling of the stage effects was infelicitous at several important junctures-at the escape of Lagadere with the infant, and at the point when the portrait speaks. Yet the charm of the drama remained unbroken, and the romantic story held its auditors with a grip of steel. The Fifth Avenue stage is a small one for such pictures as are essential to this piece, but its resources have often before now been skilfully used, and the same adroit hand was visible in the settings accomplished on this occasion. The night view of the chateau, the Spanish mountain pass, the Garden of the Regent, and other pictures, were found to be composed with airy magnificence and highly fanciful embellish

Charles Coghlan enacted Lagadere, and conquered in it with his accustomed brilliancy. The personality of the actor, however, was certainly more prominent in this performance than the generality of the character. His intellectual excitement, his noble bearing, his case of method, his vein of light, involuntary humor, and his strange air of preoccapation-all these re appeared in this work. His impassioned moments, though, were not effective, and assuredly he did not make That he towered among his associates is tree-but this result ensued rather upon the nature and attributes of the man than upon an exceptional fervor of the man than upon an exceptional fervor or inspiring electricity in the performance. Mr. Cogbian is an actor for subtle, compax characters, and for those that have their roots in real experience. Laguatere is a total fiction and a simple one. We have to record, however, his unequivocal success with the house, and the heartiest sort of a public welcome and verifict, as well for the general presentment of the old drama as for his central impersonation. The re-entrance of Miss Helen Barry was accomplished successfully, and gave much satisfaction. Miss Florence Gerard, Miss Muldener, Mr. Theo. Hamilton, and Mr. Lewis Morrison were effective and sufficient, in other essential characters.

MARY ANDERSON IN LONDON.

Miss Mary Anderson writes as follows, by the last post from London: "The interest felt here in the play of 'Ingomar' is not exhausted; on the constary, it ses. We are now entering on the sixth week of that play, to large business, and the public enthusiasm is greater as the time goes on. I know not why such mistaken reports about me and my affairs are sent to America. Mr. Gilbert and I are on excellent terms, and I have never meta more courtly and charming gentleman. I shall play his Galatca here, in about seven weeks, with his new cloug happily in our business affairs. The sixth week of 'Ingomar' opened to better business than either of the ther weeks. THE " DUKE'S MOTTO" LITIGATION.

The late John Brougham, the actor, by his last will made Annie Deland Finigan his chief legatee, be queathing to her, among other things, all his plays. A lew days ago Miss Finigan, through Cornellus A. Runkle, her counsel, procured from Justice Donohue, in the apreme Court, an injunction restraining John Stetson from producing "The Duke's Motto," one of John Brougham's plays, at the Fifth Avenue Theatre. Because of the absence of Mr. Stetson in Boston the papers were not served upon him until Tuesday evening. A motion was made before Justice Barrett, in the Supreme Court, Chambers, yesterday by his attorney, A. J. Dittenhoefer, for a modification of the injunction. An order was granted permitting Mr. Stetson to produce the play upon condition that he should deposit with the United States Trust Company $100 a week while the performances are continued as royalty, to abide the result of the suit.

MOVEMENTS OF LORD COLERIDGE.

THE CUSTOM HOUSE AND STOCK EXCHANGE VISITED -TO-NIGHT'S RECEPTION.

Lord Chief-Justice Coleridge, accompanied by Elliett F. Shepard and Lieutenant E. P. McClellan, United States Navy, made a social call upon Collector Robertson yesterday at the Custom House. The Lord Chief-Justice made specific inquiry with regard to the new tariff law, and the proportion of duties collected in comparison with those collected previous to the new law, and seemed to be deeply interested in the system of the customs management. After being conducted into the rotunda where the brokers attend to the clearances and entries of vessels for captains and owners, and also to the seizure room and other departments, he commended the perfection of this department of the Government.

Lord Coleridge then visited the Sub-Treasury and was shown the vaults. When he looked on 900 tons of silver coin he made many inquiries about the silver question of the Assistant Treasurer, and he was told that all the silver before him was represented by sliver certificates is sued by the Government. Afterward he was introduced ver before him was represented by silver certificates is smed by the Government. Afterward he was introduced at the Stock Exchange by President Hatch. He made some friendly remarks from the rostrum, informal in character, and at the end of them the Stock Exchange Glee Club sang "God Save the Queen." At a reception held in the members' parlor many members of the Board were presented to him.

While the suit of the Metropolitan against the Manhattan Elevated Railroad Company was going on in the Equity branch of the Court of Common Plens, Lord Coleridge entered. Judge Van Brunt rose and greeted him, and as he did so William M. Evarts, David Dudley Field, Francis C. Barlew, James C. Carter, Robert Sevell and A. J. Vanderpoel, the counsel upon both sides, rose to their feet and all in the court-room followed their example. Lord Coleridge took a seat beside Judge Van Brunt and the proceedings were resumed. The visitors remained about five minutes while Mr. Galloway was being examined, and then they visited the Supreme Court, where Judge Van Vorst was sitting in Special Term.

The reception to be given to Lord Coleridge to-night by the Union League Club will be brilliant, and though there will be no set addresses there will be enough formality to lend the needed dignity to the occasion. Lord Coleridge will army reply. Those of the members who are not already personally acquainted with Lord Coleridge will then be presented to him, and the remainder of the evening will be spent in general conversation. A small but carefully selected collection of paintings will be on view in the picture gallery, most of which have been lent by the artists. Shortly after 11 o'clock supper will be served. Few guests other than members of the club have been invited.

BUTLER GETTING ANGRY A FURIOUS DENUNCIATION OF DEMOCRATS FOR

DESERTING HIM. [BY TELEGRAPH TO THE TRIBUNE.]

Boston, Oct. 24.-Butler is evidently much disturbed over the action of the respectable element in the Democratic party in declining to vote for him. This, together with the circumstance that Mr. Abbott declines to run on the ticket with him, has soured the Governor's disposition. At Northampton to-day he said:

disposition. At Northampton to-day he said:

There's another boom of the Republicans. They were going to have all the old-fashioned Democrats come out against me. They've got some fifty men, men who have never been to a Democratic meeting the last twenty years. Most of them at least men who have never done anything for the Democratic party, men the most of whom were Copperheads during the war, who never voted for me and never would vote for me; who now turn up as first-class Democrats that are going to oppose the regular nominee of the Democratic Covrention, against whom there wasn't a single dissenting vote. There isn't one of them who could have got into the convention any more than they could get into Heaven without the salvation given by the redeeming Saviour. There's fifty-three of them—just as many votes as there are eards in a pack, including the joker. I'm glad they are gone. They are gone. They've outlived their strength and their Democracy, if they ever had any, and the young men who have fought the cause of Democracy are now fighting the cause of the people in the same line as ever.

Brown, now a resi-dent of Boulder, Coloraio, but formerly a resident of this city. The letter is addressed to a friend here, and ostensibly is elicited by a hint that he had intended to commit suicide in a fit of mental depression.

Brown claims that, while rowing for ple Brown claims that, while rowing for pleasure near Navy Island, he lost a rowlock and then an oar, and was then earried helpleasly down stream. The epistle describes his mental calm during this experience and pictures the secue in high-tiown language. But nothing is said of his physical sensations as he went over the Horseshoe fall. He says he awoke from a period of forgetfulness to find himself lying partly ashore at the ferry landing on the Canadian slike. Overhearing, in a train, some sceptical allusions to the story that he had gone over the falls and survived, he prepared hastily and went west, where he recovered his former vivacity and mental health.

THE DAY AND THE BOUR SECRET-DEMANDS OF A TYPOGRAPHICAL UNION.

A number of printers who had responded to a call of Typographical Union No. 6, for a mass-meeting, gathered in Clarendon Hall last night, John R. O'Dennell, president of the Union, called the meeting to order. He said that Typographical Union, No. 6, had been making active preparations for several weeks for a strike of the men employed in the job offices and on the weekly and evening papers. A scale of prices had been formu-lated by the Union for work in such offices, making the rate of English composition 40 cents a thousand cms for solld and 30 cents for lended matter, with proportionate rates for foreign languages. Some years ago be renounced idolatary, and in company with is cousin, Keshub Chunder Sen, joined the Brahmo Somal, a theistic movement started in 1830 by Ram Mohun Roy. Mr. Sen and Mr. Mozoomdar have since become prominent leaders in this religious and social movement. Mr. Mozoomdar left India last spring for a tour around the world. He is about forty-two years of age, is above the average helght, is of dark complexion and finely-cut features. He is the author of two books, one on "The Faith and Progress of the Brahme-Somal," and one just published entitled "The Oriental Christ," which is a devout and poetle conception of Christ as seen by an Oriental mind. Although English is an acquired language to Mr. Mozoomdar, he speaks it with remarkable precision. His lecture was a discussion of the social and political condition of the Hindoos, and an explanation of the reform proposed by the Brahme-Somaj. "In the new dispensation of the Brahme-Somaj," said he, "we mean to answer the great question of the age. It is the joint offspring of heathen and Christian influences. We mean in this new dispensation, under the guidance of Providence, by the inspiring grace of the Spirit, to bring about that synthesis between Western development and Eastern development, between our universal and eternal Christianity and the instincts and intuitions of an ancient people, which shall give one model amongst many of that future household where all nations and families of mankind shall stand reconciled." last spring for a tour around the world. INCREASED DEPARTMENT ESTIMATES.

The Board of Estimate and Apportionment yes terday began the consideration of the provisional estimates submitted by the various departments for their maintenance for 1884. The first estimate taken up was that of the Health Board. President Shaler said that the department desired $740,000 for its maintenance for the coming year. He acknowledged that this was $277,592 greater than the amount apprepriated for 1883, but he said one item was $200,000 for a new building for the use of the Board. Fire Commissioners German and Purroy said that their estimates were not excessive, although they called for $1,686,129 20, against $1,585,745 allowed for the present year. Judge Heary P. McGown, of the Ninth District Civil Court, who said that his court had not sufficient furniture and supplies, asked that $18,945 be appropriated. Mayor Edson said that the estimates of his office were $30,000, the same as the present year, and $10,000 for the Bureau of Permits. President Reilly said that the clerks in the Mayor's office ought to receive more pay and that the Bureau of Permits needed more clerical help. The Mayor said that under the provisions of the law no greater sum could be appropriated. taken up was that of the Health Board. President o greater sum could be appropriated.

COMPLAINTS FROM THE STEERAGE.

Upon the arrival of the steamship Polynesia of the Carr line, from Hamburg yes terday, the boarding officer of the Commissioners of Emigration was handed a complaint signed by a large number of the steerage passengers, stating in substance that the leaking of water through the decks of the steerage quarters had destroyed their clothing; that the passengers were divided into messes of sixteen persons each, and that the food was distributed in such a promisenous manner that some got an abundance and others were scantily fed, and that there was no regard paid to the separation of the sexes. Commissioner Huribut, president of the Board, held an investigation at which the complainants neglected to appear. A number of the other passenger made aflidavits that the complaint made was unjust and without foundation; but that in one instance four families occupied the apartment for single women, because there was no room for them elsewhere. President Huribut decided that the complaint set forth was unfounded, and will so report to the Board to-day. age passengers, stating in substance that the leakreport to the Board to-day.

PECK'S BAD BOY AGAIN.

From the Withington (tel.) News.

THE TRIBUNE is quite right about "Peck's Bad Boy," and it has spoken none too soon about the matter. No right-minded person would laugh at a bow who actually occupied himself with taking advantage of his parents' weaknesses or vices; and no father would like to see his own sons become infected with the notion that he could properly be treated by them with habitual disrespect. In this age there is not so much obedience to and reverence for parents on the part of children that we can afford to have any part of what is left laughed away. This is the single point that can be arged in defence of this dehased and deformed little creature, namely, that now and then he makes some one laugh. Surely this is not enough to save him. There is a decent reputable laugh, and there is also an indecent and disreputable laugh, and there is also an indecent and disreputable laugh. The ability to raise a laugh is not a sure test of humor. That this boy's supposed acts are not capable of producing clean and genuine mirth becomes obvious when we bring his moral qualities together, as The Trib-Unit does.

THE POSTAL SERVICE.

THE ANNUAL REPORT OF MR. ELMER.

FACTS ABOUT STAR, STEAMBOAT AND RAILROAD

TRANSPORTATION OF THE MAILS. WASHINGTON, Oct. 24 .- The Second Assistant Postmaster-General, Mr. Elmer, has submitted his annual report to the Postmaster-General. Public attention has been directed more particularly to the postal than to any other branch of the executive service. All of its trans actions have been critically scrutinized by the Press and public. Its conduct has involved a complete change in the udministration of postal affairs, as regards the important matter of postal transportation. It has, while bringing about a large reduction in expenditures, been charged with the much higher duty of securing to all every needed facility for the speedy transmission of in-

The cost of transportation on star, steamboat and raffroad routes for the year was $19,234,899; the cost for 1882 was $18,881,052; the total increase for 1883 was $353,847, or 1.9 per cent.

The comparisons of itemized cost are: Railroads, 1883, $13,887,800; 1882, $12,753,184, an increase of $1,034,-616. Steamboats, 1883, $607,621; 1882, $574,019, an increase of $33,602. Star. 1883, $4,739,478; 1882, $5,552, 849, a decrease of $814,371. This decrease in cost on June 30 is reduced $252,692, or to the net sum of $561.-679 by the relet and new service which began on July 1. On this item the comparison of cost for four years is given to show the entire treatment of the subject. It is as fol-

Thus the increase in mileage for 1883 over 1880 is seen to have been 1,927,787 miles, and the decrease in cost of 1883, compared with 1880, $2,582,021. It is believed that this service is now relieved of all unwholesome exerescences, and that from this time the natural growth of population, etc., will add to the cost.

IMPROVED TRANSPORTATION METHODS, Mr. Elmer makes suggestions to secure the use of im-proved means for the transportation of the mails, in order that the service may be performed in keeping with the character that should mark the transportation of the United States mails. To accomplish this object he has prescribed restrictions to sub-letting that will place the service when sub-let in the hands of responsible sub-contractors; not to decrease cost, but to make the service creditable to the Government. The estimate for this item for 1885 is set down at $5,600,000.

The steamboat service cost, in the year ending June 30, 1880, $887,221; and in the year ending June 30, 1880, $887,221; and in the year ending June 30, 1883, $607,621, or decrease for 1883, $279,600. This decrease is due to the discontinuance of unnecessary service. Present laws disqualify persons from bidding and becoming contractors only for three causes-wilful neglect coming contractors only for three causes—wilful neglect to perform service, previous fallure to carry out contract, and conspiring to prevent bilding. Mr. Elmer recom-mends that additional discretion be vested in the Post-master-General to exclude persons from bilding for other causes, which his experience in the conduct of the busingss convinces him should also be made the ground for such exclusion.

GROWTH OF RAILROAD SERVICE. An interesting statement of the growth of the railroad service shows that the miles of new service for the inst hree years would circle the globe, and is greater than the entire mileage at the close of the first twenty-eight years of the system, and that the cost of the service is not disproportionate to its growth and the increasing reve ies of the department. It is evident that the main profit derived from postal matter comes from that transported by railroad. The payment of amounts earned on roads leased and operated by the companies owning the subsileased and operated by the companies owning the subsidized roads involves the expenditure of more than half a million dollars a year, that must be provided for by direct appropriation. This is only a seeming increase in the cost of the service, as the amount has heretofore been credited to the companies against their indebtedness to the United States. The report sets out clearly the cost of service on each route, and public scrutiny as to the correctness of these relations is invited. The estimate for this tiem for 1885 is placed at $13,735,216. Mr. Elmer says with regard to rates allowable for railroad service, that this question is being carefully considered by the committee of which he is chaffman, and that that report will contain a comprehensive statement of his views on this subject, and he therefore refrains from any discussion of the question at present.

MONEY ORDER RECEIPTS.

Washington, Oct. 24.-A statement prepared or the Money Order Division of the Post Office Departnt shows that the net revenue from domestic money order transactions during the fiscal year ended June 30, 1883, was $311,704. The receipts on account of foreign orders were $99,923.

KU-KLUX RING LEADERS ON TRIAL. REPUBLICAN VOTERS WHIPPED, BEATEN OR SHOT,

ATLANTA Go., Oct. 24,-The Banks County Ku-Klux trial was begun yesterday. The defendants are Jasper, James, Dilmus and Neal Yarbrough, Lovel Streetman, Bold Emery, State Summons and E. H. Green. Ex-

Congressman Speer appeared for the prosecution. Warren Bryson testified that he was called from his house one night in July and beaten by a crowd of masked men. The mob swore vengeance against the negroes of the locality who voted for ex-Congressman Speer. Bryson reated. Calvin Bush testified that treated. Calvin Bush testined that he was taken out of bed by a howling mob, who stripped him and gave him 175 lashes. He was stripped in court and displayed the sears made by the lastics, between East 186th and East 157th str.

Elisha Brooks told of how he was taken out and whipped by a crowd, who remarked: "You see what your d—d Speer has done for you." He recognized Jasper Varbrough in the mob, and Yarbrough said: "If you know anybody in this crowd and tell on him I'll put you in your grave." Brooks was also beaten with brass knuckles. Benjamin Saunders gave an account of how he was shot three times by a mob and left for dead. The defence will endeaver to prove an ulfol, and will contend that the cases should be tried in the State Court.

A BANK PRESIDENT SPECULATING.

BORROWING MORE THAN SEVENTY-TWO THOUSAND DOLLARS FROM THE BANK,

PHILADELPHIA, Oct 24.-William Young, President of the Commercial National Bank of Reading, Penn., confessed judgment yesterday in favor of the bank for $72,357 12. Mr. Young says that he has borrowed money from the bank for some time and that when his notes became due he was unable to meet them. He said that nearly every investment and speculation he made during the past six months had proven a loss to him. His principal losses have been in stocks and paper of commercial houses. His son is cashier of the bank. He said that the bank had been somewhat in difficulty until this relief came. The president refused to state what his personal indebtedness was and his affairs are now being settled up.

TWO FAILURES IN PHILADELPHIA.

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 24.—Although the failure of Maule Bros. & Co., humber dealers, Monday, was unexpected, there was no appreclable effect upon the trade outside of the firms of John W. Smith & Co., and E. P. Maule & Co., which appear to be connected with the larger firm both by family and friendly ties. Both of the smaller houses have succumbed. John W. Smith said yesterday that during the panie of 1873 he had placed a mortgage for $47,000 upon the mill property. This mort-yesterday that during the paints of $1.50 and the amount of his debts to that house would not exceed what could be raised on the mortgage. His other debts would not aggregate much over $6,000. He will make an assignment to-day, and if his creditors give him sufficient time he hopes to be able to meet his obligations.

The wholesale clothing house of Stern, Trautman & Company has failed with liabilities amounting to $150,000. The flows was established twenty years ago. The firm consists of Morris Stern, David Trautman and Lehman Ellerman. Of the entire indebtedness, it is stated that $127,000 is in form of sectual cash loans. The principal creditors and those for whom execution was issued yesterday upon confessed judgments are Joseph Stern, a son-in-law of Morris Stern, to whom the clothiers are indebted in the sum of $20,000, Jonas Langfelt $10,000, and Mayer Trautman, a brother of David Trautman, $10,000. It is calculated that the remaining cash creditors and the general market, to whom there is owing not more than $25,000, will get little or nothing.

The firm estimates its assets at $30,000, but reports made by the Sheril's officers indicate that even less than that sum will be realized from the property of the firm.

WARNED BY A TOADSTOOL. A well-known family of Brooklyn was surprised and frightened the other morning at the sight of an ungainly toadstool which had spontaneously sprung up in the night just on the edge of the kitchen sink. To all ap-pearances everything was perfectly clean, yet here stood pearances everything was perfectly clean, yet here stood this vulcar vegetable growth, and as recently they had lost a child from diphtheria no microscope was necessary to prove to them that disease germs do exist, as here was this silent exponent of moisture and improper condition. Speaking to their physician about it, his reply was a Although your nonse is as perfect in its plembing as any I know of, yet in every house a proper disinfectant is as essential as soap. To ignore and neglect their sanitary importance causes more than half the slekness we meet. I do most carnestly advise you and every householder to use frequently, as a matter of cleanliness and precaution, the remarkable disinfectant known as Platt's Chlorides. I advise this for I know what it is, and in common with hundreds of other physicions always use and recommend it. It has no smell, no objection, is clean, reliable, and cheap, and especially adapted to indoor household uses. A quart bottle may be obtained at any drug store for 50 centa, and this used accordingly to the directions ought to last you a month.—[Brooklyn Eagle.
